Paul Announces Opening of Galveston Office

May 31, 2005 Congressman Ron Paul will open a district office in Galveston in July to better serve residents in surrounding areas, including the city of Galveston itself, Anahuac, Baytown, League City, and Texas City. The goal is to provide convenient constituent service for citizens living in Galveston and Chambers counties. The new office will be located in the federal building at 601 Rosenberg on Galveston Island. Paul also maintains offices in Lake Jackson and Victoria. Constituents needing help with federal agencies like the Social Security Administration, Veterans Administration, and the Internal Revenue Service can call or visit with office staff for assistance. The Galveston office also will provide constituents with an opportunity to meet Congressman Paul and discuss federal issues with him. Paul will host a town hall meeting to mark the opening of the office later this summer.
